

Cosmedix Products: chirally correct medical skincare

What is Chiral?

Most biomolecules, including skin care ingredients, are chiral. This means they have a "left" and a "right" chemical orientation, much like our hands (chiral, pronounced "ki-rul," is Greek for hands).

Chiral molecules, like our hands, are identical mirror images of each other, some of these fit into the skins receptors while others do not. Usually only one of the mirror images is good for your skin, so it is necessary to use only these when formulating effective products.

"This is the future of skin care, and I am excited that you can participate in the first medical skin care line to take advantage of chiral technology."

- Ben Johnson, M.D.

A superb product line for sensitive skin. This condition is often the result of using products with irritating components. There is often a coexisting problem with facial capillaries. There is a full range of products which support sensitive skin within the Cosmedix line.
